THOMPSON ROAST: BIG SUCCESS

The March 18th Roast of James Harold Thompson (Class of 1969) was a big success. To date, over $68,000 has been raised to endow a scholarship fund for needy students. This amount represents more money for scholarships than has been raised in the history of the College of Law.

Governor Bob Graham served as Master of Ceremonies for the dinner event which saw more than 530 people pack the dining room at the Tallahassee Leon County Civic Center. Roasters included Senator Dempsey Barron, Representatives Elaine Gordon and Herb Morgan as well as Board of Regent member Hyatt Brown. Gary Williams (Class of 1972) served as Chairman of the Roast. Mike Hightower, a vice-president of Blue Cross/Blue Shield was executive director of this success.

You're Invited to Breakfast at Boca

Last year's alumni breakfast at the Florida Bar Convention was such a rousing success that a repeat is planned at Boca Raton this year. The breakfast will take place on Saturday, June 29, at 7:30 AM at the Boca Raton Hotel and Club. Senator Ken Jenne will be the featured speaker.

On Friday, June 28, you are invited to attend an alumni reception from 6:00-7:00 PM at the Hotel. This will be a good opportunity to meet the Dean and visit

With money still coming in, James Harold has committed himself to continue to pursue the original goal of $100,000. Contributions are still being accepted to the fund which will produce its first scholarship grants during the 1985-86 academic year. The alumni support to date has been strong, and it is greatly appreciated. With Federal Student Loans in jeopardy, these funds could prove the difference for many of our future students' ability to stay in school and complete their legal education.

D'ALEMBERTE LISTED AMONG NATION'S MOST POWERFUL LAWYERS

Dean Talbot D'Alemberte was listed in the April 15, 1985 special edition of The National Law Journal's most powerful lawyers in the country. Only two other Florida attorneys, Chesterfield Smith and Robert H. Traurig both of Miami, made the list. The National Law Journal picked those 100 individuals who will exercise the most force, authority and influence on this country as lawyers in the upcoming years. Also taken into consideration was the impact these 100 individuals have already had on our society.

Below is what the editors had to say about Dean D'Alemberte:

From the Dean

With so many extraordinary events at the law school this Spring, it is hard to select a single event for this report. We have had impressive speakers, including former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, Governor Robert Graham, Congressman Gephart, Stanford Professor Robert Gordon, Sen. Kenneth Jenne and Patrick Norton of the State Department. Students have been working to produce the first Law Review Legislation Edition and the second edition of the Journal of Land Use and Environmental Law. Faculty members have served on ABA/AALS law school inspection teams (see Faculty Notes) and have worked closely with students in an expanded Moot Court effort.

In March, the Board of Governors of the Florida Bar met in open session in the student lounge, providing a unique opportunity for students to observe the work of the bar and an opportunity for the leaders of the bar to be at a law school. The Florida Judicial College met at the FSU Conference Center, and visited the law school for a theatre presentation and reception.

The vitality of the alumni of this law school has been felt with the beginning of the Book Awards Program. Alumni and other lawyers and judges also participated in the vastly improved research and writing program by appearing as judges for the oral arguments by first year students.

From all events this Spring, I must single out the James Harold Thompson Roast which was a spectacular success. The many people in this state who wanted to honor James Harold (who we have come to know as "St. James") came together in an event which was great fun and enormously beneficial to the law school. We raised a considerable amount of scholarship money and, as a side benefit, saw the attention of the state's political leadership focused on the FSU College of Law. To all of you who supported this event: Thanks. It was a great occasion for a great legislator on behalf of a great law school.

From the Board

The James Harold Thompson Roast, held in Tallahassee on March 18th, was a grand success. Governor Bob Graham served as master of ceremonies as roasters took their turn telling jokes and poking fun at our own James Harold Thompson (Class of 1969). The Roasters included Senator Dempsey Barron, Representative Elaine Gordon, Representative Herb Morgan and former Speaker Hyatt Brown. Early reports indicate that we will net over $68,000, and the money is still coming in the mail.

The first book awards were presented to the winning students on April 12th. Money is in hand for 18% of our goal with commitments for an additional 30%. We still need help in getting law firms involved in the support of higher education, much in the same manner corporations have been doing for many years. Please lend a hand if you can. Let me know of prospects you know of and I will be happy to make the contacts.

June is shaping up as alumni meeting month in three of Florida's major cities. Orlando (June 3), Pensacola (June 6) and Jacksonville (June 11) are tentatively targeted for a visit by Dean D'Alemberte and myself. We hope to have receptions in all of the cities. This will give the new Dean the opportunity to report about his first year at the College of Law and will give alumni the chance to meet and question him on plans for the future. We hope you will mark your calendars now, look for information in the mail, and plan to attend. We hope to start alumni chapters in all three cities as we have already done in Tampa.

The Alumni Board of Directors will meet during the Florida Bar's Annual Convention in Boca Raton (June 26-29). Alumni should make plans to attend our annual breakfast and reception during the convention. Last year's turnout was great, and hopefully this year's will be even better. Be sure to register for these events when you send in your form to the Bar.

Oxford 1985 has been redirected. With the overwhelming interest in English Common Law, the Tax portion of the program has been dropped in favor of more emphasis on the area of choice expressed by early registration. Time still remains for those who wish to spend a week studying in Oxford, England and enjoying the countryside. For reservations, call Steve Chapman at the Center for Professional Development, (904) 644-3801.

Hope to see many of you soon. Please keep in touch.

PRO BONO AWARD WINNERS SEMINAR

On March 13, a special one-hour ceremony was held at the Supreme Court of Florida to honor this year's Tobias Simon Pro Bono Service Award Winner, 17 recipients of The Florida Bar President's Pro Bono Service Award, and an entire law firm given special commendation for collective activities in providing legal services to the needy. Lawyers were eligible for the Chief Justice's and Bar President's awards if they practiced in Florida and were not employed on a full-time basis by an organization which has as its primary purpose the provision of free legal services to the poor.

The Chief Justice commendation, given for the first time to a law firm, went to Thompson, Zeder, Bohner, Werth, Adorno & Razook of Miami.

The Tobias Simon Pro Bono Service Award Recipient was William J. Sheppard of Jacksonville, Florida. Sheppard has engaged in the private practice of law since 1968. Although he engages in a wide variety of legal services for the poor, the primary focus of his practice is criminal defense and civil rights litigation. Sheppard attended a symposium at the Florida State University College of Law earlier in the day, along with many of the honorees. He told the audience of students and visitors that during the 1960's he came to grips with the realization that large groups of people were unrepresented. He said, "I realize that as a lawyer, I owe the public more than does the average guy. If you go to work as a lawyer, and don't take on at least half a dozen poor people (as clients) then you are not a lawyer as I see it."

The Florida Bar President's Pro Bono Service Awards went to 17 attorneys, including Florida State alumni Joan H. Bickerstaff of Melbourne, Florida (Eighteenth Judicial Circuit) and John C. Guerriero of Ft. Pierce, Florida (Nineteenth Judicial Circuit). Bickerstaff, class of 1977, is a former Assistant Public Defender whose pro bono representation has included criminal defense, capital appeals, representation of dependent children and general civil litigation. Guerriero, class of 1969, averages at least two cases a month, totalling some 180

PERFORMANCE BRINGS LAW AND THEATER TOGETHER

On March 14, following the Florida Bar Board of Governors Meeting, the F.S.U. Theater Department performed two scenes in the courtroom of the College of Law. Dean D'Alemberte invited the School of Theater to participate in the day's events by performing material with a courtroom base or themes of law.

Actors Tim Egan and Philip Nelson did a scene from "Inherit the Wind," by Jerome Lawrence. Heather Heath and Joedy Lister performed another hours of annual pro bono effort in such actions. He serves as a volunteer guardian for the disabled and elderly of St. Lucie County in competency actions and proceedings under the Adult Protective Services Act.

Addressing the students gathered in the recently completed College of Law courtroom, one honoree noted lawyers could serve in more ways than trial work—by writing grant proposals, giving advice about employment contracts and "doing the kind of things that make a major difference in the lives of poor people. Why do it? Because it makes you feel good. My best memories of being a lawyer are helping poor people, not representing paying clients."

scene from "Whose Life Is It Anyway," by Brian Clarke. The former work deals with the issue of creationism versus evolutionism. The latter deals with euthanasia. The response was strong to both. In fact, Professor George Judy, who directed the performances, said some judges in the audience had just recently had to deal with euthanasia and were especially moved. Professor Judy hopes that this is just the beginning of future collaboration between the School of Theater and the College of Law.

Dr. Kurt Waldheim

Waldheim Speaks at Brown Bag Lecture

Once again, the law school was honored by the presence of former Secretary-General of the United Nations and Distinguished Lecturer of International Law and Relations at Florida State, Dr. Kurt Waldheim.

College of Law graduate Barrett Johnson, class of '74, introduced the speaker. Dr. Waldheim discussed the international situation, stressing that North-South relations were of equal importance as that of East-West countries. Because the Superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union, are so influential, Dr. Waldheim expressed concern that Northern, wealthy countries' relationships with Southern, underdeveloped countries was too often given less attention. He stressed that we tend to forget the interdependence of countries in every corner of the world, noting that if the underdeveloped Southern countries break down, the United States would suffer, as well. Five million jobs in this country, after all, are based on trade with developing countries.

The theme of the lecture might be described as the necessity of constructive relations and open dialogue between all persons and their governments. To achieve peaceful coexistence, the countries need to accommodate each other. Waldheim sees the Geneva talks as paving the way to agreement. Yet, he does not expect any immediate concrete results from the Summit Meetings. The importance of the meetings is in the getting together. Waldheim stated that dialogue is needed before we can have concrete results. On the way to improving communications between the Superpowers, the former Secretary-General praised the Reagan Administration for returning to traditional diplomatic channels, rather than last Term's use of the public news media to release our government's intentions to the rest of the world. Waldheim compared the courtesy government leaders expect from each other to that which individuals expect and deserve.

The attendance was very high for the lecture, part of the "Brown Bag Lecture Series." Audience reaction was good to Dr. Waldheim's belief that the world's problems need to be dealt with through a global approach.

Sundberg Addresses April Graduates

April Graduation was held in Ruby Diamond Auditorium with the majority of the 147 members of the class of 1985 participating in the ceremony. Guest speaker for the occasion was former Supreme Court Justice Alan Sundberg who served on the Court from 1980 to 1982. His address was well received by this group of men and women who are leaving law school and entering the legal profession.

Commencement exercises took place at 10:30 AM on Saturday, April 27, 1985. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Plaza of the Capitol building for graduates, their families and friends.

Tallahassee; before taking over the deanship last July, was a senior partner with Miami's Steel, Hector & Davis; a member of the Florida House of Representatives from 1966-72, and while there, a member of the far-reaching and controversial Florida Law Revision Commission; in 1975 was chief counsel of the Florida House Select Committee on Impeachment, which conducted an inquiry into three state Supreme Court justices, two of whom later resigned; from 1977-78, chairman of the Florida Constitution Revision Commission; director and president of the American Judicature Society; state delegate to the ABA and considered by some a future candidate for ABA president."

SMILE, YOU'RE ON CANDID CAMERA!

(Reprinted from an article by Fred Strasser in the March 18, 1985, issue of The National Law Journal.)

Florida, the State that pioneered cameras in the court, is now casting an unblinking eye on its Supreme Court justices.

The novel idea - videotaping oral arguments before the high court and selling copies - is a joint venture between the justices and the dean of Florida State University College of Law, Talbot D'Alemberte, a former Miami lawyer who helped open the courts to cameras several years ago.

According to the plan, two cameras are permanently mounted in the chambers. One zooms in on the bench; the other watches the attorneys. Both just keep rolling. At day's end, tapes of the proceeding - each about 60 minutes long - can be copied and purchased at cost. All arrangements are handled by the school, which hopes to build a library of oral argument - and maybe make a little profit.

The effect of all this on judges?

"I guess you wouldn't want to fall asleep on camera," said the court's jocular chief justice, Joseph Boyd. "I think there's some justices across America who'd go crazy with that one, but here we're more used to a television presence. . . We think this is the way to open up the chambers."

But the judges and lawyers have no reason to be camera shy.

"Unless they twist their necks out of joint, the cameras are out of sight," says Edwin M. Schroeder, director of the law library and associate dean.

As for the "handful" of buyers so far, says Mr. Schroeder, "Everything is too new to say what the reaction is."

Oxford Advanced Legal Studies Program Takes Shape

Attorneys interested in participating in the Advanced Legal Studies Seminar at Oxford are reminded to register soon. From July 21-26, immediately following the ABA Convention in London, the program will combine legal study with an opportunity to tour some of the most historic and beautiful spots in England.

Based on the preference of early registrations, the Tax portion of the Advanced Legal Studies Program in Oxford, England has been dropped in favor of dedicating more resources to the English Common Law portion. Professor Jeffrey Hackney of Wadham College and J.K.B.M. Barry Nicholas, Principal of Brasenose College, will head up the program. Congressman Claude Pepper is also making plans to address the seminar.

While you participate in a Legal History seminar, your spouse can take advantage of exciting scheduled activities. The Spouse Program tentatively includes: tours of Oxford; a tour of Winston Churchill's birthplace; a trip to the Cotswolds; and a visit to Stratford-upon-Avon, where participants will attend a performance at the Royal Shakespeare Theatre. All afternoons will be left open for couples to enjoy the surrounding countryside.

The seminar in Legal History will analyze the evolution of the law as we know it. Topics for discussion include the development of the court system, the writ system, and the conduct of trial and mode of proof.

All of this, and much more, will cost $1,500 for the professional part of the program, including room, board, course materials, tours, and other extracurricular events. For those interested in the Spouse Program, an additional $750, which covers touring, room, board, and joint activities, will be charged. Expenses of attending this program may be deducted pursuant to Treas. Reg. Section 1.162-5.

Dean D'Alemberte and the College of Law hope you will take advantage of this exceptional opportunity to further experience the personal and pro-

NORTON SPEAKS ON UNITED STATES — NICARAGUA TOPIC

"The United States, Nicaragua, and the International Court of Justice" was the topic of a lecture on April 3, 1985. The event was co-sponsored by the College of Law and the Florida State University Peace Studies Committee.

Patrick Norton from the Legal Advisor's Office of the U.S. Department of State was the special guest lecturer. Mr. Norton was the head of the United States litigation team in the Nicaraguan jurisdiction case before the International Court of Justice. After introductory remarks about the Court by Professor Donna Christie, Mr. Norton explained the U.S. position in last year's case as well as the U.S. view on the role of the International Court of Justice. Mr. Felix Masud, Ph.D. candidate and specialist in Latin American history, was guest respondent. The controversial topic attracted a large audience of students, faculty, and guests who had the opportunity to ask questions, air their views, and attempt to better understand the difficult issues.

JONES RECEIVES SPECIAL AWARD

At the Spring 1984 graduation ceremony, Karen Jones received a special Dean's award in recognition of her contributions to the law school. Ms. Jones, who is deaf, became the first deaf lawyer to become a member of the Florida Bar when she was sworn in at ceremonies in Orlando in November, 1984. She is currently practicing in Tampa.

Professor Robert W. Gordon of Stanford University was the featured speaker for the Mason Ladd Memorial Lecture presented on March 14, 1985, at the College of Law. The Ladd lecture series honors the founding Dean of the Florida State University College of Law, Mason Ladd. After serving as Dean of the University of Iowa College of Law, Dean Ladd came to Florida in 1966 to help establish the new law school at Florida State. He was a great law teacher and lawyer and an authority on Evidence Law.

Professor Robert Gordon

Professor Gordon joined the Stanford faculty in 1982, having taught previously at the State University of New York and the University of Wisconsin. He received both his A.B. and J.D. from Harvard. He is a director of the American Society for Legal History and a trustee of the Law and Society Association.

The title of Professor Gordon's remarks was "Unfreezing Legal Reality: Critical Approaches to Law." He took the position that law is indeterminate and that no answers to legal questions appear from legal doctrine.

People must shed the idea that law is inevitable or fixed and band together to effect purposeful change. Law is contingent to a particular society at a particular time and we should unfreeze the notion that it is in any way fixed or could not be changed by appropriate action.

On Friday, March 15, Professor Gordon made opening remarks at a Colloquium on Critical Legal Studies. Responses were made by Professors Adam Hirsch, Lynn Henderson, Jack Van Doren and Larry George. Professor Van Doren served as moderator.

Student Argues Case Before Florida Supreme Court

On April 10, 1985, Nicholas Whittle, a third year student and April 1985 graduate, argued a criminal appeal before the Florida Supreme Court. Mr. Whittle appeared before the court in his capacity as a certified legal intern participating in the law school's Appellate Public Defender Clinical Program. The appeal involved a question of statutory construction, specifically the meaning of certain provisions of the Florida Statute defining grand theft. Mr. Whittle had previously completed an externship with the Sarasota Public Defender's Office during the Fall 1984 term. In his argument before the Florida Supreme Court, he was supervised by Douglas Brinkmeyer

Law School Sculpture Plugs Empty Space With Creative Energy

(Reprinted from Tallahassee Democrat, April 12, 1985; ARTS by Betty Rubenstein)

The first outdoor modern sculpture purchased by the State of Florida for the campus of Florida State University now stands in front of the law library on Pensacola Street — and it is handsome!

"Parted Pinnacle with Descending Form," the work by Michigan artist John Brough Miller in red-brown steel, is an intriguing conversation between a circle and a line. It makes a dialogue of shapes that swell and flatten out into multiple patterns.

Standing 18 feet high, costing $12,000 and weighing one ton, the welded sculpture belongs to that group of works called "formalist" which represents the art of contemporary sculptors who create out of the endless geometry of nature.

In this work, Miller, son of a Michigan farmer, has taken primary design elements, as Mozart could take a few notes, turn them around, divide them, stretch them and then freeze them into permanence.

At first glance, a globe balancing precariously at the top of a narrow bar that tapers into thin air is surprising. The eye then sees a slender triangle lead to a double-angled corner — almost at ground level — meet another sphere and then another half-buried in the earth.

"Pinnacle" fills a once-empty space with creative energy. Using simple, basic elements, a new and original unity has been born. Above all, the sculpture provides a celebration of the human spirit — it calls attention to the amazing forms around us that we usually ignore. Like an exclamation point in a sentence, this art work by Miller calls attention to the grammar of sight and the grace of vision.

The 52-year-old Miller, now a professor at Texas Woman's University, didn't always work as a sculptor. After four years of teaching high-school economics, he went to Canbrook Academy of Art in Michigan and earned an MFA in 1964. He began working in wood, but switched to steel because of its versatility and durability.

In a catalog detailing his works, he wrote that he intends his works "to dominate the viewer but at the same time to be scaled to human size."

Already dubbed "Statue of Frogs" and "Balls of Justice," by students sunning themselves in its vicinity, the sculpture has provided some controversy. While the students encountered recently seemed pleased with the acquisition, they assumed they were in the minority. One law student, J. Patrick Bassett, wrote in the April 4 "Flambeau" that he would have preferred the proverbial "man-on-a-horse" statue.

This complaint is typical of people who either don't or won't see anything but the most literal kind of subject matter in art — the kind of people whose sensibilities have not taken into account the changes in culture in recent years.

Miller addressed this when he wrote, "Since I've been born, we've had very few years of peace; the most extraordinary things have happened in science. I've seen prayer changed because of discoveries in space . . . But

Environmental Law Journal Publishes First Issue, Plans Second

The Florida State University Journal of Land Use and Environmental Law published its first issue in January of this year. The second issue will be published in April 1985 and will include the following articles: "The Warren S. Henderson Wetlands Protection Act of 1984" by Mary Smallwood, Silvia Alderman, and Marty Dix; "Government Subsidy of Coastal Barrier Development" by Michael Donovan; and "Local Government Plan Consistency and Citizen Standing: Renard in the Chicken Coop?" by Terrell K. Arline, David Layman, and Carl Coffin. In addition, the second issue will include Conference Remarks from "Managing Megagrowth — Florida's New Mandate," held at the Florida State Conference Center, January 24-25, 1985.

The Journal is designed to serve the legal profession in the critical and developing areas of land use and environmental law. The Journal's primary goal is to provide information on issues of particular interest in Florida. Joyce Matthews, Editor-in-Chief, said, "As the Legislature will be discussing these same issues, it was important to us that we provide a tool in a timely manner to be used in the drafting of this legislation." The subject area will not be limited solely to Florida, and the Journal welcomes comments concerning articles or topics individuals would like to see included. Alumni are encouraged to submit works of appropriate subject matter for publication.

Current Journal members include Joyce L. Matthews, Editor-in-Chief; Pamela K. Frazier, Executive Editor; D. Robert Bradshaw, Managing Editor; Lynn Marie Finnegan, Research Editor; and Christopher C. Brockman, Associate Editor. Articles and Notes Editors are Karen A. Brodeen, Richard M. Carnell, Jr., Chris McGuire, Kathleen Stover, and Richard M. Tucker. Staff members are Daria L. Burgess, Robert N. Clarke, Jr., Scott DeLeve, Carlos Diez-Arguelles, Anna Cam Fentriss, Robert D. Fingar, Ray J. Hicks, Michael S. Minot, and Jay Taylor.

In March, the Journal announced the selection of new members from the first and second year classes. These members were chosen solely on the basis of writing abilities. Those selected were: Second year: Anthony A. B. Dogali, James J. Evangelista, Stephanie M. Gehres, Hope M. Grunnet, Kenneth Adrian Horkey, James A. Jurgens, Steven Leifman, Charles W. Mangum, Laura Rush, and Jacquelyn L. Waters. First year: Jeff Cohen, Robyn A. Deen, Kimberley Fitzpatrick, Franklin J. Graham, Timothy E. Monaghan, Neal Osiason, Marshall J. Osofsky, and Bruce D. Page.

The Journal is presently funded by the legal community and is seeking additional advertisers, patrons, sponsors, and contributors. Matthews explained, "While we received minimal funding from the student government last year, it is impossible to produce a quality publication without financial assistance from outside sources. We appreciate contributions in any amount, and special recognition is given to contributors in the Journal."

Subscriptions are available for $28.00 per year ($14.00 for a single issue) by contacting the Managing Editor, Journal of Land Use and Environmental Law, FSU College of Law, Tallahassee, Florida 32306. Patrons, sponsors, and contributors receive a free subscription.

Robinson Speaks At Balsa-Barristers Spring Banquet

The eighth annual banquet of the Florida State University Chapter of the Black American Law Student Association (BALSA) and the Tallahassee Barristers was held on April 5, 1985, at the Florida State Conference Center. Randall Robinson, executive director of the Trans-Africa organization in Washington, DC, was the guest speaker. Robinson, a prolific writer,

Members of the FSU Law Review are hard at work monitoring this year's session of the Florida Legislature. The reason for all the activity is that the Review is in the process of compiling its first annual Review of Florida Legislation, scheduled for publication this Fall.

According to Legislation Editor Floyd Self, most of the first issue's topics and authors have been selected and are already in the early writing stages. Articles to be published will review such issues as growth management, the creation of a statewide prosecutor, medical malpractice reform, insurance company acquisition laws, children's welfare, public financing of elections, certificates of need and electronic access to state computer data bases.

The Review of Florida Legislation promises to be a valuable resource for lawyers, judges, government administrators and others interested in a thorough summary, history and analysis of significant Florida legislation.

The legislation edition is one of only three special legislative issues published by law reviews nationwide and the only one in Florida devoted to Florida legislation. The publication will be available by subscription to the FSU Law Review, College of Law, Tallahassee, Florida, 32306-1034. Contact Floyd Self, Legislation Editor, for more information - 904/644-2045.

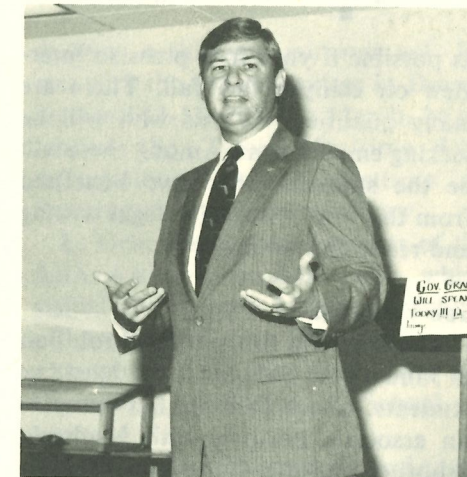

has had articles published in leading newspapers including the Washington Post and the Boston Globe. His Trans-Africa organization is a lobby for African and Afro-Caribbean affairs in the U.S. Proceeds from ticket sales went to the BALSA-Barristers Scholarship Fund which assists needy black students in furthering their legal education.

GOVERNOR GRAHAM VISITS COLLEGE OF LAW

On March 27, Governor Bob Graham met with law students and faculty at the College of Law. The informal gathering, held in the Student Lounge, was part of a series of lunchtime lectures by distinguished speakers participating in the "Brown Bag Lectures." Relevant issues from increasing tuition rates to Rosemary Furman and the Death Penalty were discussed.

Increasing tuition is one way, the Governor said, to raise faculty salaries. In order to reach the goal of increased quality of education, it is necessary to increase the quality of faculty. Graham felt increasing the latter could only come about by giving teachers the incentive of higher, more attractive offers.

The law students in the large audience seemed receptive to Governor Graham's analysis of the recent Rosemary Furman case. He felt the situation was indicative of the current legal system's failure to serve many public needs. Ms. Furman offered a challenge to the legal profession to recognize and deal with increments to meet those needs. Graham encouraged attorneys and law students to spend some time in public service, as part of fulfilling a public responsibility.

Questions were posed about the possibility of a state lottery, to which Bob Graham has been opposed. The Governor fears what this "regressive tax" says about our values. He encourages people to spend their energy and earnings to invest in themselves, through education, and other means of attaining goals that depend upon our own work. He sees the lottery as illustrative of opposite values because it encourages reliance on serendipity and chance to achieve material rewards.

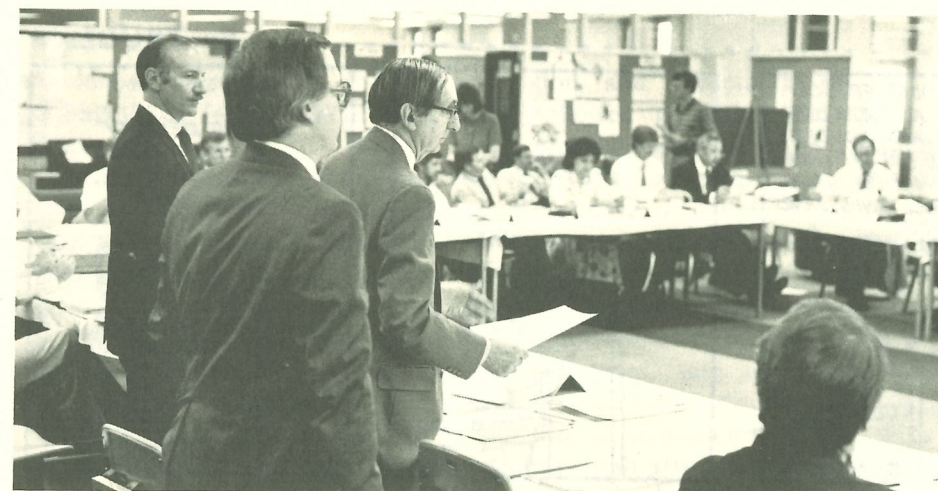

The meeting closed with a discussion about the Death Penalty. Governor Graham reaffirmed his belief in the execution of those on Death Row, citing precedence as far back as the Bible to support his view. Deterrence of future murders was one major influence on Graham's opinion.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS MEETS AT LAW SCHOOL

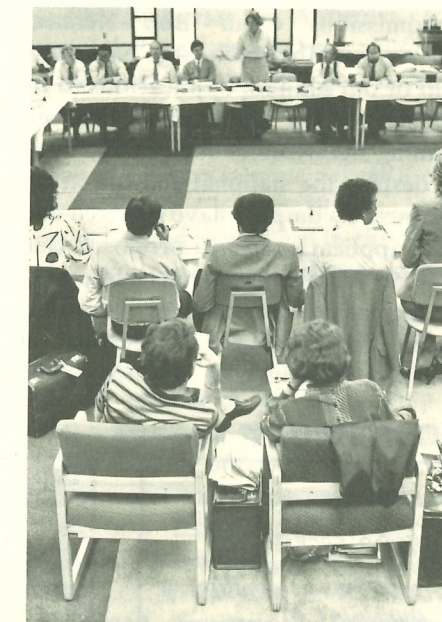

Another first for the College of Law occurred with the meeting of The Florida Bar Board of Governors at the College of Law on March 15, 1985. In an open meeting held in the Student Lounge, the Board conducted the business of its regular session after being welcomed by Dean Sandy D'Alemberte.

Since the meeting of the Board lasted from 9:00 AM until 5:00 PM, the students had ample opportunity to observe the proceedings. Appearances by Attorney General Jim Smith and Chief Justice Joseph Boyd highlighted the meeting. Attorney General Smith spoke on several issues including the repeal of the sales tax exemption for legal services. He indicated that he could not support efforts to maintain the exemption as funds were needed to provide more competent teachers for the education system. He stated that he did not endorse a state run lottery as a substitute means of financing education. Other topics covered by the Board of Governors included opening lawyer disciplinary actions to the public and establishment of a public agency to provide representation for death row inmates.

Placement Update

Class of 1983-84 Survey

Response to the Class of 1984 Employment Report and Salary Survey was good, and information has been forwarded to the National Association for Law Placement for incorporation into the national statistics. A preliminary look at the results reveals that approximately 75% of the class is employed in the legal area with about 45% in private practice and another 30% in business and government (including public defender and state attorney). More detailed information will be available soon.

Fall On-Campus Interviews

On April 1, the Placement Office began accepting phone reservations for Fall interview dates. By the end of the day, 41 employers had reserved dates. Space is limited this year so you should contact the Placement Office as soon as possible if your firm plans to interview on campus this fall. There are many qualified students who will be seeking employment. Among these will be the students who have benefited from this year's intensive legal writing and research training.

Job Fair 1985

The long trip to the Miami Job Fair in January has paid off for at least two students. Laura Ferrante has accepted an associate position with Mathews, Osborne, McNatt, Gobelman & Cobb in Jacksonville, and Linda Spaulding begins employment with the Ft. Lauderdale firm of Brinkley, McNerney, Morgan and Ashcraft shortly after graduation. There may be others who have not reported results. Again our thanks to alumni who supported the 1985 Job Fair.

Admissions Update

Admissions Chair Bob Kennedy reports that, thanks in large part to the help of our alumni, applications to the College for the next August class are running significantly ahead of last year — despite the national fall-off in applicants. To date we have received over 1250 applications for a proposed class of 175. We are particularly interested in increasing our minority applicant pool, and Kennedy especially encourages alumni with contacts in the Black and Hispanic communities to identify prospective minority applicants for us. An enormous amount of time is spent by the faculty committee reviewing the information in individual files in an effort also to identify well qualified students who might not have high undergraduate grades or LSAT scores. Alumni recommendations are very useful in that effort as well.

Law Library Services Available To Alumni

Photocopies

For Alumni outside the Tallahassee area, the Law Library will make available copies of statutes and judicial opinions. Charges are $.20 per page plus $1.00 for postage and handling. Other materials will be copied at the same rate after a determination that no copyright violation is involved. Materials will be sent by first class mail. Determined efforts will be made to respond by the day following receipt of a request. (Phone: 904/644-3405). The Law Library requests that alumni in the Tallahassee area arrange for copying by their own agents.

Reference Services

Reference librarians will respond to requests for information by phone (904/644-4095). The Assistant Director of the Law Library, Dr. Gail Reinertsen, and Reference Librarian, Dr. Michael Lynch, are both experienced librarians holding law degrees who will make every effort to discover the information you require.

A note of thanks to alumni and friends of the College of Law who have been instrumental in bringing their law firms, corporations, or agencies to the College to interview. These expressions of loyalty and concern are encouraged and appreciated.

Faculty Notes

Henry J. Bailey, III, finished his year as a visiting professor in April. He completed the manuscript for Volume III of Oregon Uniform Commercial Code and also completed two supplements for Brady on Bank Checks while he was teaching in Tallahassee.

Donna R. Christie has co-authored with Bram D. E. Canter a chapter in the Water Resources Atlas of Florida entitled "Water Regulation and Policies."

Steve Goldstein was chosen by the Legal Services Corporation to serve as a member of a team charged with the responsibility of evaluating the Legal Aid Program of Los Angeles, California. Also, Professor Goldstein's article, "Observation on the Death Penalty," appeared in The Advocate, the alumni magazine of the Lewis and Clark Law School. Professor Goldstein returned in January, 1985 from Portland, Oregon, after spending the Fall term teaching at Lewis and Clark.

Adam Hirsch has been appointed to the editorial board of the Law and History Review, the official publication of the American Society for Legal History. He will visit at Upsala University in the Summer of 1985.

Joshua M. Morse, III, one of three Commissioners for Uniform Laws of the State of Florida, is currently serving on the Oil and Gas Legislation Committee and on the sub-committee drafting a dormant minerals act. He met with the sub-committee in Denver on April 11-13, 1985. In March, he attended the Tulane-Maritime Law Association Admiralty Institute on Bankruptcy and Admiralty Law.

L. Orin Slagle was a member of the ABA/AALS inspection team which visited Georgetown University School of Law in April. Last Fall, he served as a member of the team that visited the University of Baltimore School of Law.

John W. Van Doren published an article entitled "Exploring Contradictions" in the April 1985 issue of The Florida Bar Journal.

Donald J. Weidner served as a member of an American Bar Association Site Inspection Team to conduct an accreditation visit to Arizona State University College of Law in Phoenix, Arizona, on February 3-6, 1985.

John F. Yetter published an article entitled Florida's New Speedy Trial Rule: "The Window of Recapture" in the April issue of the Florida State Law Review. He recently completed a revision of the criminal procedure materials used by the Florida Judicial College. He will speak on "The Confrontation Clause vs. Electronic Appearances: Due Process and Technology in the Courts," at the Florida Bar Conference on Technology and Law in Miami, May 6-7, 1985.

Marin Scordato is one of four new faculty members.

NEW FACULTY HIRED FOR FALL 1985

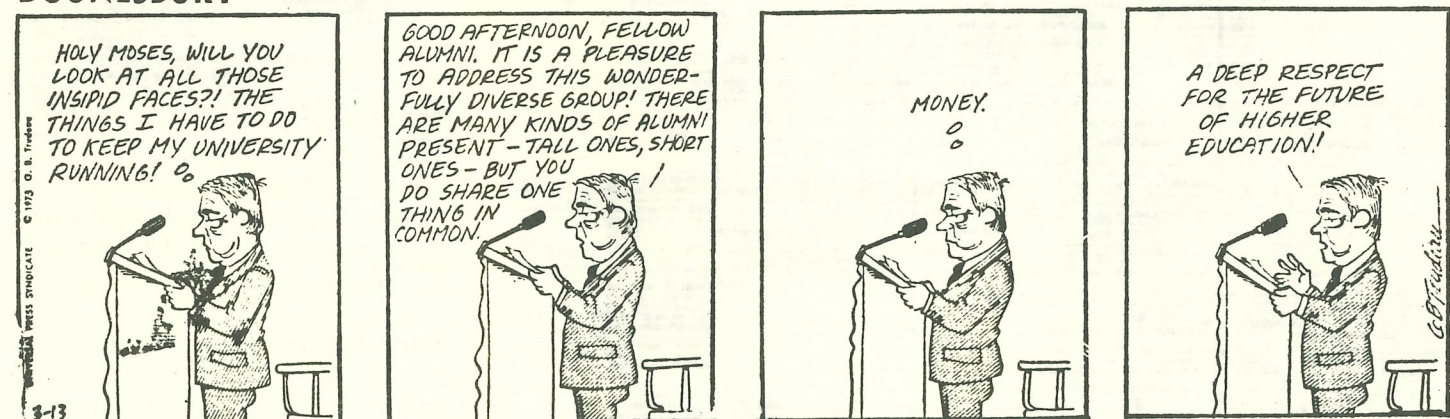

In the fall, the College of Law will welcome to the faculty Lee Goldman, a 1979 graduate of Stanford University Law School. He is a member of the Order of the Coif, and has been a visiting assistant professor at the University of Detroit Law School since 1983. In the fall, Mr. Goldman will be teaching courses in Antitrust, Commercial Paper, and Sales.

Michael Ansaldi will be joining the faculty also. Mr. Ansaldi graduated from Yale Law School in 1983 and is presently an associate at Wilson & McIlvaine in Chicago, Illinois. He will teach Comparative Law in the fall and Contracts and Estate Planning in the spring.

In the March Newsletter, we announced the hiring of two other new faculty members: Steven G. Gey and Marin Scordato. Mr. Gey was the Articles Editor of the Columbia Law Review and has been practicing in the Litigation Department of the New York firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison. Mr. Scordato graduated from the University of Virginia School of Law in 1979, and has been practicing in the Corporate Department of the New York firm of Cravath, Swaine & Moore.

Dean D'Alemberte has said of this faculty recruiting effort that it is one of the most extraordinary accomplishments of the College and that major credit goes to Don Weidner and a hardworking appointments committee.

I have basic feelings about God, and anti-god."

Miller's statement illuminates the changes that have influenced his sculpture and made it impossible for him to follow a 19th century tradition such as a man-on-a-horse.

Part of a $128,691 arts-purchasing program, "Pinnacle" is the boldest university acquisition so far. Where the business school and the athletic department have spent their funds on indoor paintings and photomurals, the law school committee courageously chose to make a public statement.

The general procedure in the selection and acceptance of the work followed guidelines set out by the Florida legislative statutes established in 1979. In the case of the law school sculpture, a committee of three faculty members and one student appointed by L. Orin Slagle, former law dean, chose Miller from among a group of artists. One committee member, Dean Edwin Schroeder, said the board "neither favored nor discriminated against Florida artists but selected a piece that was both affordable and appealing."

Although the sculpture is well located in relation to the law buildings, it is already hidden by trees on the east.

Library Collection Reaches 250,000 Volumes

The growth of the Florida State University College of Law Library was marked by the acquisition of its 250,000th volume. The volume is the first edition of The Second Part of the Institutes of the Lawes of England by Sir Edward Coke, published in London in 1642, and will be added to the Library's rare book collection. The important volume is part of a commentary on the laws of England. The rare book collection already includes the second and fourteenth edition (1629 and 1791) of The First Part of the Institutes, the sixth edition (1680) of The Third Part, and the first edition (1644) of The Fourth Part.

Law Librarian Ed Schroeder, Dean D'Alemberte and Acquisitions Librarian Ann Bardolph admire the latest addition to the Law Library.

MOOT COURT COMPETES, HAS BANQUET, NAMES MEMBERS

The Florida State University Moot Court team of Valerie Messick and Henry Tipton placed third in the National Administrative Law Competition held in Dayton, Ohio, March 29-30. Henry Tipton won best advocate award. Their plaque will be proudly displayed in the Moot Court trophy case. The team was coached by Dean L. Orin Slagle.

The Moot Court team of Astrid Wistedt and Kathryn Hathaway took third place honors at the Craven Constitutional Law Competition, Chapel Hill, N.C., February 27-29. The team was coached by Professor Nat Stern.

On April 6, the Moot Court team selected twelve new members from the first-year class. The competitors were chosen on the quality of their oral advocacy skills and brief-writing ability. Contratulations to the new members: Steve Ball; Kathryn Bradley; Kim Fitzpatrick; Pam Mark; Dominic McKenzie; Marshall Osofsky; Robert Schreiber; Lansing Scriven; Layne Smith; Mary Stenson; Donna Waters; Mike West.

The annual Moot Court Banquet was held on April 9 at the Tallahassee Hilton Hotel. In attendance were Moot Court alumni, faculty members, and the Dean of the law school, Sandy D'Alemberte. The program included the introduction of new members, presentation of senior certificates and acknowledgment of competition coaches. It was highlighted by an address by Senator Kenneth C. Jenne, President-designate of the Florida Senate. Senator Jenne is a graduate of Florida State University's College of Law.

A new award was instituted this spring for the recognition of an outstanding Moot Court member. The award is in honor of our Moot Court "founder, advisor and best friend," Professor William VanDercreek. Jeff Fleming, a graduating senior, was the first recipient of this award.

"Coach" Slagle and Moot Court team members Valerie Messick and Henry Tipton proudly display the plaque received at the National Administrative Law Competition.

When the small trees around it grow and the visual experience of the law students expands, perhaps the sculpture could be moved to a more prominent position.

There are no gallery hours. The sculpture is a gift from the citizens of Florida to the citizens of Florida. A "thank you" is in order.
