Johnson-Caldwell House Dedicated in May

May 15th marks the 40th Anniversary of the signing of the legislation which made Florida State College for Women coeducational. The bill creating Florida State University was signed May 15, 1947, by Governor Millard Caldwell. The College of Law celebrated this anniversary in a very unique way by dedicating the former home of the late Governor and his wife, Mary.

The Johnson-Caldwell House is now located on the Village Green. It was donated to the College of Law by the Caldwell's daughter, Mrs. Sally McCord, after Mrs. Caldwell's death last Spring. The house was originally built in 1852 and was located on Old Bainbridge Road until it was moved to its present site at the law school. After restoration is complete, it will house law school faculty and students.

In April, the Caldwell House took on a finished appearance in preparation for the May dedication.

Many People To Thank For Village Green

As the time nears for completion of the Village Green, the College of Law looks gratefully at the number of individuals, organizations and businesses who have been instrumental in bringing this dream to a firm reality.

Two lovely homes have been provided to grace the east lawn of the College of Law. The Sarah Payne Cawthon house was dedicated in the Fall of 1986, and this month on May 15, 1987, the Caldwell House was dedicated in a formal ceremony. Appreciation is again expressed to Sarah Cawthon Shaw and Anne Cawthon Booth for donating the first home and to Sally McCord for the gift of the former home of her parents, Governor and Mrs. Millard Caldwell.

For special assistance on the Caldwell house and continued support of the project, special thanks to Tallahassee City Commission members Jack McLean, Jr., Betty Harley, Carol Bellamy, Dorothy Inman, and Frank Visconti and to City Manager Dan Kleman. Appreciation also goes to Leon County Commissioners Robert Henderson, William Montford, Gayle Nelson, Doug Nichols and Lee Vause.

In addition to these, there are many others to thank for donations of service, time, or gifts to the Caldwell House relocation and restoration.

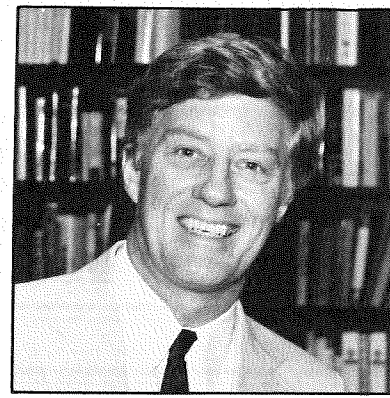

The principal funding for the project is through the office of George Firestone, Secretary of State, but the additional contributions provide a margin for elegance which distinguishes this project.

The Alumni Association plans to circulate proposals for finishing and furnishing the rooms in the houses and the rotunda building, and this will be a focus of next year's capital campaign.

D'Alemberte

A few important components can be looked at as a quick way to analyze the quality of a law school. The first of these are faculty and students.

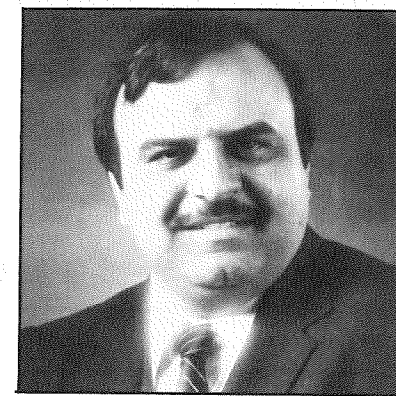

In American legal education, it is probably not too far off the mark to say that the student body might be the first point of analysis since many law schools maintain their reputation through a process of attracting very good students and not doing very much damage to them. Our aspirations for legal education are beyond that model. Having a strong and energetic faculty is the best way, in turn, to recruit distinguished students to the law school. However important the other elements, and they certainly include a fine library and an excellent physical facility (both of which we have), building an excellent faculty ranks high on the priorities of this law school.

The law faculty at Florida State is built on an exceedingly strong base. Dean Mason Ladd had great judgment and recruited an excellent young faculty when the school began. A tradition of teaching has been well maintained. During the recent ABA reaccreditation site visit, a member of the site inspection team told me that after observing classroom performance of our teachers, he knows of no place where teaching was of any higher quality. With few exceptions, our faculty is an excellent teaching faculty. Moreover, the faculty has compiled a very distinguished publication record. Again, with few exceptions, faculty members have worked hard at scholarly activities.

The new faculty who will join us next year will help the school advance further. Each of them has strong scholarly interests, and each of them promises to be strong in the classroom. I hope that you will look through the Faculty News and understand the importance of building a strong faculty.

Credit for this work goes to all of the faculty. Particular thanks are due to Professor Don Weidner who chaired the Faculty Appointments Committee for two years (one year while he was also serving as associate dean) and to Dean Orin Slagle who has just completed a spectacular year of faculty recruiting.

The President

The annual meeting of the College of Law Alumni Association will be held during the Florida Bar Convention in Orlando on June 12, 1987. The Bar Convention is also our opportunity to get together at our Alumni cocktail reception on June 12, and our Alumni Breakfast on June 13. We hope that many of you can attend and take the opportunity to meet with old friends and learn firsthand about the school's accomplishments of the past year.

This message is my last chance to communicate with you as the President of your Alumni Association. If I don't see you at the Convention, I want you to know that it has been a distinct honor and privilege to serve.

Your Board of Directors and the other officers of the Association, Dean D'Alemberte, and the law school staff deserve a great deal of credit for the success of our Alumni Association's efforts this year. In addition to our very successful Charter Class Reunion, the Alumni Giving Program exceeded our budget projections by February of this year, and giving from all sources has exceeded four million dollars. These are accomplishments of which we can all be proud.

I know that my successor, Don Gifford, will carry on the tradition that we started so many years ago, and I look forward to working with Don and giving him my full support.

FUND RAISING

Alumni Association Reports $4,200,000 In Contributions

More than $4,200,000 in contributed funds has been generated for fiscal year 1986-1987 according to a recent report from the College of Law Alumni Association.

Included in the total contributions are the donation of $2,400,000 for the Village Green, the $1,100,000 Katzentine gift plus $400,000 in state matching funds, restricted funds of $77,500, unrestricted funds of $155,677, and interest and rental income of $76,080.

The $155,677 in unrestricted funds exceeds the goal of $150,000 for 1986-1987 due to the success of the Annual Giving Drive. At the end of March, revenues included $35,659 from Alumni Annual Giving and $6,487 from Faculty Annual Giving. Presidents Club contributions consisted of $8,774 from alumni and $5,530 from faculty. The Book Awards Program generated a total of $92,000, and $7,227 came from miscellaneous contributions. The increase in 1986-1987 contributions will provide for additional scholarships and growth programs in the next fiscal year.

The Book Awards Program now has more than 50 sponsors. Several Awards are still available for sponsorship. Classes have responded well to the Annual Giving Drive, and a breakdown of giving by class will be compiled and published in the August Newsletter.

Alumni are to be commended for their generous contributions to the Alumni Association and their support of the College of Law and its programs.

Grants Exceeding $135,000 Received By College Of Law

Grants exceeding $135,000 have been received by the College of Law in the past six months.

Public Defender Training. In October 1986, the College of Law was awarded a $78,750 grant from the U.S. Department of Justice in conjunction with the Florida Public Defenders Association for advanced training of experienced state public defenders. The grant was supplemented with a $25,000 match from the Public Defenders Association, for a total of $103,750.

Two advocacy seminars have been created with the grant money. The programs will focus on strategic planning negotiation, client counseling, jury selection, and expert testimony in felony cases. The first group of 40 public defenders arrived in May for a week long training session. The second session will be held in August.

Participants in the programs will include several experienced public defender attorneys as well as Justice James Adkins, Professor James Alfini of F.S.U. College of Law, Millard Farmer, Professor Elliot Milstein of American University of Law, Professor Wallace Kennedy of F.S.U. Psychology Department, Richard Ervin of the First District Court of Appeal, and four faculty members from the F.S.U. Theatre Department who will critique the students.

Director of the project is Nancy Daniels, Extern Coordinator at the College of Law.

Business Skills Course. Professor Joseph Jacobs received a $10,000 grant from the Corporation Section of The Florida Bar during the Section's first Annual Convention held on March 5-7, 1987, in Fort Lauderdale.

The purpose of the grant is to underwrite the costs of Business Skills, a course which provides students with an integrated, practice-oriented approach to duties of an attorney engaged in commercial practice. The course includes a week long presentation by Conflict Management, Inc. introducing students to the art of negotiation.

This is the second year that Professor Jacobs has received a grant from the Corporation Section.

Summary Jury Trials Study. The Florida Dispute Resolution Center has received a grant of $17,920 to study the use of summary jury trials in the 19th Judicial Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the Middle

Dispute Resolution Center Receives Grant To Study Jury Trials

The Florida Dispute Resolution Center has received a grant of $17,920 to study the use of "summary jury trials" in the 19th Judicial Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida.

The summary jury trial was developed by a United States district court judge in Ohio in response to increased court costs and delays in civil trials. It allows opposing attorneys to present cases in narrative fashion to a jury whose verdicts, though not binding, usually take less than a day and often result in settlement of the lawsuit. The Florida study is expected to aid judicial officials throughout Florida in making informed decisions about adopting the process in their jurisdictions.

The Dispute Resolution Center was established this past year as a joint program of the College of Law and the Supreme Court of Florida.

District of Florida. Professor James Alfini serves as Director of Education and Research for the Center. (See detailed article in this issue.)

Policy Studies Clinic. Last fall, the Policy Studies Clinic received a STAR research grant of $28,500. The funds are being used to study issues confronting state and local governments and changing inter-governmental relations. The project includes three regional public forums, a conference, and a final report that will be submitted to the Legislature and to the Department of Community Affairs. Professor Donna Christie is Director of the Policy Studies Clinic.

Professor James Alfini and Michael Bridenback discuss plans for the Alternative Dispute Resolution Center.

The purpose of the Center is to encourage experimentation with, and to assess the efficacy of, various alternative dispute resolution methods in the State of Florida. Particular attention is given to court-connected dispute resolution programs.

The Center has a wide-ranging research program which employs law students to work on various research and educational programs. Its educational program is aimed at providing forums for lawyers, judges, and members of the general public to learn about and discuss dispute resolution developments and issues.

Associate Professor James J. Alfini serves as the Center's Director of Education and Research. The Center's Administrative Director is Michael Bridenback, Director of the Judicial Management and Coordinating Section of the Office of the State Courts Administrator.

The first group of 40 public defenders will arrive the first week in May during semester break. The second group will be in Tallahassee during the August semester break. Nancy Daniels, Extern Coordinator at the College of Law, is director of the project.

CLE AND CONFERENCES

CLE Programs Produce Continued Response

Videotapes of the homecoming weekend CLE, "Civil Litigation in Federal Court," were a popular item as the deadline approached for recertification to the Northern District in Florida. The Alumni Association had requests from law firms and lawyers for 36 sets of the tapes, servicing a total of 68 lawyers. Former Governor Reubin Askew and Senator Dempsey Barron were among those purchasing CLE tapes. Some lawyers opted to return to the law school on Saturday, January 24 or February 14, 1987, when tapes were shown for credit.

During the fall semester of 1987, the Alumni Association will sponsor two CLE programs. Professor Charles Ehrhardt's Federal Practice program will be held on Friday, October 30, during homecoming weekend. Another CLE on a topic to be determined will be held on October 2, 1987.

Regional Constitutional Conference to be Held in Fall

The College of Law will host the Southeast Regional Conference on the Constitutional System at the College of Law on September 10, 1987. Participation will be by special invitation and will include scholars and statesmen from the southeast region of the United States. The public is invited as observers.

Professors Donna Christie and Roger Cunningham visit with Attorney Silvia Alderman during conference break.

Water Future Conference Held

"Florida's Water Future: Crisis or Opportunity" was the subject of a statewide conference sponsored by the Policy Studies Clinic and the Alumni Association on January 29 and 30, 1987. Two hundred and sixty-six people registered for the conference which was held at the Tallahassee/Leon County Civic Center.

Legislative, business and environmental leaders joined state and local officials to discuss problems such as how to safely supply water to future Floridians. The conference also reviewed threats to the state's natural underground drinking water supplies and discussed more efficient regulations of demands on water quality and quantity.

Attorney Silvia Alderman was the general conference moderator and Professor Donna Christie chaired the steering committee. Dr. Jim May, FSU Institute of Science and Public Affairs, coordinated the conference. Speakers included Senate President John Vogt.

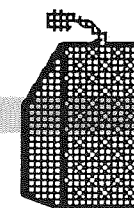

Law School and Religion Department Sponsor "Church-State" Conference

A conference, "The Public Philosophy in a Pluralistic Society: Religion and State in the American Experience," was held February 5-7, 1987, at the Florida State Conference Center. It was directed by Professor Leo Sandon of the Department of Religion with help from Professor Ken Vinson of the College of Law.

This conference on the American experiment in "church-state" arrangements focused on topics of the original intent of the First Amendment's religion clauses and their interpretation and application in two hundred years of American history. It also explored the concern for the public philosophy (a common faith or social consensus) in a pluralistic society.

Professor Kenneth Vinson was a panel respondent, and Carol Bellamy, Class of 1978 and Executive Director of the U.S. Constitutional Bicentennial Commission of Florida, served as moderator for one of the sessions. Dean D'Alemberte presided over the Friday evening session.

SPEAKERS

Hewlett Speaks on Women's Lib

Dr. Hewlett's controversial bestseller, A Lesser Life: The Myth of Women's Liberation in America, has been nominated for a Pulitzer prize. Also participating on the panel were Professors Bill McHugh and Donna Christie of the College of Law and Dr. Joan Haworth of the Economics Department. The session, including questions from the audience, was videotaped by the College of Law. Dr. Hewlett also spoke that evening at a banquet at the Wakulla Spring Lodge.

FACULTY NEWS

Associate Dean MacNamara To Enter Law Practice

Associate Dean Stephen R. MacNamara has resigned from his position with the College of Law to become a partner with the law firm of Fowler, White, Gillen, Boggs, Villareal & Banker of Tampa. MacNamara will open a Tallahassee office for the firm with the primary emphasis on legislation and administrative law.

MacNamara

A 1982 graduate of the Florida State University College of Law, MacNamara joined the faculty in 1984 to assist the school with its development efforts. Working with the Alumni Association Board of Directors, MacNamara helped raise more than a quarter of a million dollars in his first year, up from $61,000 the year before. In 1985-86, the law school raised $2.7 million dollars in all funds and nine months into this fiscal year more than $4.2 million dollars has been generated including money for various construction grants.

During MacNamara's tenure as the Dean for Administration and Development, the F.S.U. College of Law received full funding for two eminent scholar chairs and promise for a third chair to be funded next year.

"I have thoroughly enjoyed working with the alumni, faculty, students, and staff here at the College of Law for the past three years," said MacNamara in announcing his return to private law practice. "It has been the most enjoyable, challenging, and rewarding job of my career."

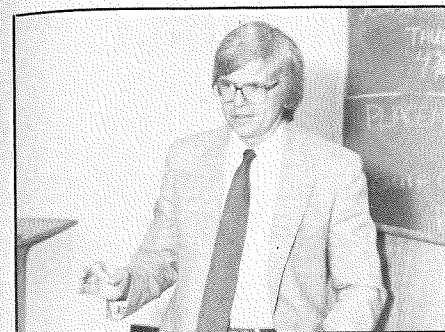

MacNamara, a former Legislative Aide to United States Senator Richard Stone and Florida Senator Dempsey Barron will represent Fowler-White clients before the Legislature, the Cabinet, the administrative agencies and the Governor here in Tallahassee. He will also continue to assist the law school on a number of major development proposals currently in progress.

Judicial Education Supported By College Of Law Faculty

Through the efforts of several of its faculty members the College of Law continues to support judicial education both in the State of Florida and on a national level. Through CLE programs, judicial conferences and participation in various lectureships, judges have been educated in many important areas of the law.

John Yetter, Associate Dean and Professor of Law, is the first faculty member to lecture to all three groups of judges (county, circuit and appellate) in one year. On May 7, 1986, he lectured to Circuit Court Judges at a Conference held in Orlando followed by lectures at the Florida Circuit Judges Conference in Orlando and the Florida Appellate Judges at a meeting in Long Boat Key. A lecture was given to the Florida County Judges Conference in Orlando on January 14, 1987. Dean Yetter's topic for these lectures was Criminal Law and Procedure.

Professor Yetter may hold the Florida judicial education title, but he has a close challenge in Professor Charles Ehrhardt who also has a claim to the title. During the past year, Professor Ehrhardt has been a member of the faculty of the Federal Judicial Center and spoken at the District Judges Workshop of the Sixth Circuit in Nashville and the Fourth Circuit in Myrtle Beach. He has also been involved with the National Judicial College in Reno, Nevada. This summer, he will teach a two-week evidence course at the General Jurisdiction course in Reno; last summer, he was co-director of the Advanced Seminar in Anglo-American Jurisprudence at Oxford,

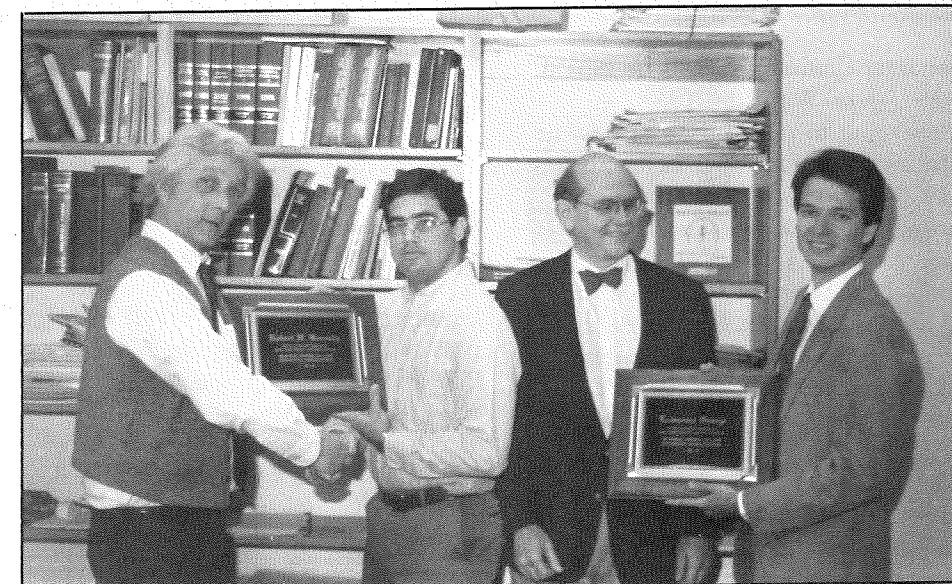

Yetter

England, which the National Judicial College co-sponsored with the College of Law. Last summer, he also spoke at the national convention of the National Judges Association, an association of non-lawyer judges.

In Florida, in addition to his annual presentation to the Florida Circuit Judges Conference, Ehrhardt conducted a two-day evidence course for sixty county judges in Naples and for sixty circuit judges in Tampa.

James Alfini, Associate Professor of Law and Director of Education and Research for the Florida Dispute Resolution Center, is involved in education programs designed to provide a forum for judges and others to learn about and discuss dispute resolution developments and issues. He recently received a grant of $17,920 from the Florida Bar Foundation to study the use of summary jury trials in the 19th Judicial Circuit and the U.S. District Court for the Middle District of Florida. He organized and moderated a session on judicial settlement techniques for the fall educational session of the Florida Circuit Judges Conference and moderated another session for the County Judges Conference.

The College of Law hopes to continue its involvement in judicial education through expanded programs and the efforts of its faculty members to contribute to this area of legal education.

Professors Robert Kennedy and Larry George were honored by SALSA for three years of loyal and dedicated service to the organization. A beautiful plaque was presented to each by SALSA President Jerry Castiello.

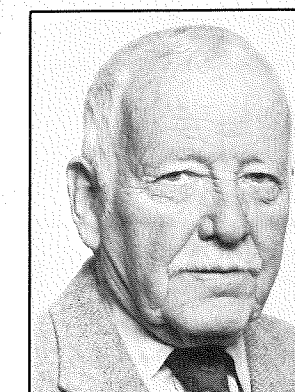

Legal Studies Workshop Holds Spring Semester Sessions

The F.S.U. Legal Studies Workshop series, organized by Professor Adam Hirsch, continued to draw faculty interest during the Spring Semester. A January session featured Bruce Benson, Professor of Economics, who spoke on "Privatization in Law and Order." On March 26, 1987, Niel Betten and Edward Keuchel, Professors of History, discussed "Capital Crime and Punishment in Jacksonville in the 1890s." Informal receptions and discussions were held following each of the programs.

Visiting Faculty Members Include Oxford Professors

Highlighting the slate of visiting faculty members for 1986-1987 are two professors from Oxford University in England. Peter Mirfield and Derrick Wyatt, who have taught in the law school's Oxford Summer Program, will visit in Tallahassee. Professor Mirfield will teach Comparative Evidence and Criminal Procedure, Jurisprudence, English Constitutional Law, and a seminar in Philosophy of Criminal Law. A course in Law of the European Economic Community will be taught by Professor Wyatt.

Returning to the College of Law as a visiting faculty member in the Spring of 1988 is Professor Richard Babcock who was a special guest at last year's Journal of Land Use and Environmental Law Awards ceremony. Professor Babcock is a former president of the American Planning Association and chairman of the Advisory Committee of the American Law Institute project on a Model Land Development Code. His latest book is The Zoning Game Revisited, co-authored with Charles L. Siemon, a Florida State law graduate. Babcock is a retired partner in the Chicago law firm of Ross and Hardies.

Another visitor this coming year is Mack Allen Player, Regents' Professor of Law at the University of Georgia School of Law and currently scholar-in-residence with the Civil Division of the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. He will teach courses in Employment Discrimination, Labor Law and Civil Procedure. Professor Player is the author of Cases and Materials on Employment Discrimination Law, 1980. He has served as a consultant with the Georgia Institute of Government, Bureau of Training, and has been a Master with Georgia Fair Employment since 1984.

Policy Studies Clinic Completes Wide Range of Projects

The Policy Studies Clinic has worked on nine major projects this year. The results of some of these projects have been published recently and others will be released soon.

Water Resources Management. The Clinic recently published a collection of papers addressing important water resource management issues. These papers were developed by students participating in a fall 1986 Water Resource Law seminar sponsored by the Policy Studies Clinic and the five water management districts and were distributed at the conference held by the Clinic and the FSU College of Law Alumni Association on January 29-30, 1987.

Election Laws. The Clinic will publish an analysis of the Florida election laws in April. The study compares Florida's laws with those of other states and makes suggestions for changes in the Florida election code.

Intergovernmental Relations. The Clinic is involved in a STAR grant project aimed at improving state and local government relations. Workshops were held in Tampa, Miami, Jacksonville, and Tallahassee to discuss important issues facing municipal and county government. The focus of the project is to help state and local officials identify the most appropriate programmatic, administrative and fiscal arrangements to deal with policy problems.

Health and Rehabilitative Services. The Clinic will publish "Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services: An Agency in Crisis" in May. This monograph discusses the criticism of HRS, the impacts of its 1975 reorganization, and its future budgetary needs. The paper was designed to increase awareness of HRS' continued need for adequate funding with the ever-growing demand for HRS' services by Florida residents.

Juvenile Justice System. The Clinic will soon publish a comprehensive study of delinquent and dependent children and their involvement in Florida's juvenile justice system. The report is designed to alert the Florida Legislature and all interested citizens to the problems, deficiencies and successes of Florida's Juvenile Justice System.

Beach Access. The Beach Access project is a compilation of student papers along with commentary by learned experts in the environmental field. The authors present a survey of various coastal states and the approaches they employ to ensure adequate access to state beaches.

Legislative Code of Ethics. "A Proposed Code of Ethics for the Florida House of Representatives" was prepared in 1986-87 by the Clinic in response to a request by Jon Mills, Speaker of the Florida House of Representatives, for a draft of a new set of rules governing member conduct and covering important areas left unaddressed in the present rules.

Beach Erosion. The Policy Studies Clinic reviewed legislative efforts to propose a statewide, comprehensive Beach Management Plan designed to help combat problems Florida faces with beach erosion. The study outlines the history of the Legislature's efforts, analyzes the resulting bill and makes recommendations to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of Florida's Beach Management Plan.

State Lottery. The Clinic has been involved with one of the most highly visible current public issues, the drafting of the State Lottery legislation. The Clinic has provided legal and technical advice to both the Legislative and Executive branches of state government. Issues addressed include the creation of a State Lottery Commission overseeing the broad operation of the department.

Policy Studies Fellows Complete First Year of Program

The Policy Studies Clinic, a research arm of the FSU College of Law, completed its first Fellowship program this spring. In the Fall of 1986, the Clinic selected eight law and graduate students to enhance its research efforts by working on issues of interest to the public.

During 1986-87, the Policy Studies program completed projects for the Legislature, the Governor's Office, state agencies, and public interest groups. The Fellows made a significant contribution to applied research and informed decision-making.

The backgrounds of the Policy Studies Fellows are varied.

Lawrence G. Walters is a second year law student who received his degree in Communications and Allied Legal Services from the University of Central Florida. He has published an article in the Clinic's monograph series on Coordination of Land and Water Management. He will be working for the law firm of Muller, KirkConnel and Lindsey of Winter Park this summer.

SuZanne Peck comes to the Policy Studies Clinic from the Economics Department. She received her B.A. degree in Economics from the University of Connecticut and is currently seeking her master's degree in Economics.

Kevin Markey is a second year law student who graduated from the University of Florida in 1985 with a degree in Finance. Mr. Markey is an articles and notes editor for the Journal of Land Use and

SCHOLARSHIPS AND AWARDS

The O'Kelley Scholarship was presented to Sandra Ross by Attorney Frank Santry.

Ross Receives O'Kelley Memorial Scholarship

After several years as a newspaper reporter, mostly covering courts, Sandra Bower Ross was so intrigued by judicial procedures she decided to make her own news in courtrooms.

In July 1985, she resigned from her job with the Fort Myers News-Press to enter the College of Law. Successful in her law studies, she ranks first in her class and has been awarded the $2,000 A. Frank O'Kelley Memorial Scholarship.

The O'Kelley Scholarship, given annually to an outstanding law student, was presented to Ross on April 9, 1987, in a ceremony at the law offices of Field, Granger, Santry & Mitchell in Tallahassee. The scholarship is named for A. Frank O'Kelley who joined the firm of Keen & Allen in 1943 and became a prominent civic and business leader in Tallahassee. A trial lawyer, he practiced with the firm until his death in 1975.

Ross has completed her second year of law study and will graduate in April 1988.

University Fellowships Awarded

The talents and abilities of three current law students and two students who will begin law study in the Fall were recently recognized by the awarding of University Fellowships. The Fellowships, which carry $6,000 stipends and tuition coverage, are awarded by the Department of Graduate Studies and Research and are based on academic standing, a statement of goals and purposes and recommendations of faculty. Recipients Rosa Maria Armesto, Eric M. Cumfer, Sandra B. Ross, Laura L. Dizney and Lisa M. Reinhardt competed against outstanding students university-wide for a limited number of awards.

Rosa Maria Armesto began her law study in Fall 1986. A Miami native, she graduated from Florida State University magna cum laude, majoring in political science. She was a member of the Golden Key National Honor Society and was President of Phi Theta Kappa National Society. She has been recognized by the City of Miami for her community involvement and service.

Eric M. Cumfer graduated summa cum laude with a degree in History from the University of South Florida and began his law study at Florida State last fall. His college career began with plans to major in political science, and he soon branched out to other social sciences. A constant concern of his has been power in human relations, and he feels the law profession will afford him an opportunity to fight for the victims of the overly powerful.

Sandra B. Ross is a second year law student at FSU. A native of Illinois, she received her B.S. in journalism at the University of Illinois and her M.A. in Public Affairs Reporting at Sangamon State University. She was named an Edmund J. James Scholar and was a member of several scholastic societies including Alpha Lambda Delta and Tau Kappa Alpha. During her senior year, she received the Donald Chamberlain Legislative Award given to students who show potential for success in political reporting. Prior to entering Sangamon State, she interned for five months with the National Journal in Washington, DC. She was the court reporter in the city room of the St. Louis Globe Democrat and later at the Fort Myers New Press.

Laura L. Dizney will enter the College of Law in the Fall of 1987. An undergraduate of Florida State, she holds a double major in communications and music. Her activities have included membership in Symphonic Band, University Symphony, Chamber Orchestra, and Choral Union. She is a member of Pi Kappa Lambda and the little sister organization of Phi Mu Alpha.

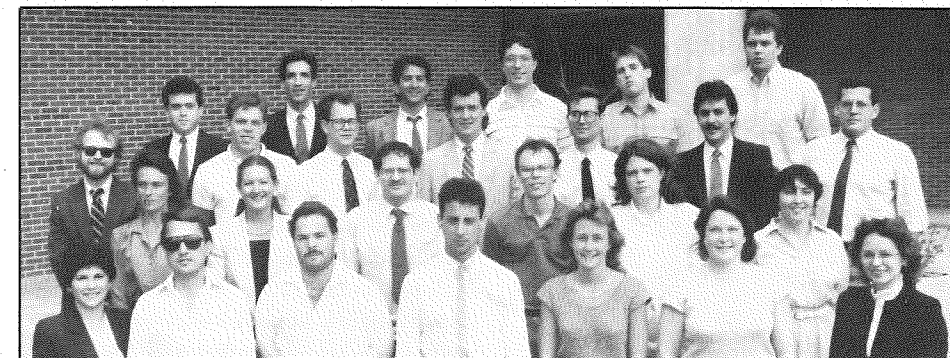

Lisa M. Reinhardt will graduate in August 1987 from Florida State University with a degree in Business and will continue her studies at the College of Law in the Fall. While at Manatee Community College, she was president of "Courtly Jesters," a club of performing clowns who performed at schools, nursing homes, and civic events. At FSU, she has served as vice president and president of the Society of International Business Students where her duties included drawing speakers from the business community for meetings.

Second Annual Spring Awards Provide Alumni Scholarships

The Second Annual Spring Scholarships Awards resulted in alumni scholarships being awarded to thirty-three law students at the College of Law. The awards were announced at the end of February.

Since there were twice as many applicants as awards, the process was extremely competitive. In addition to the requirement that recipients be in good standing, the major criterion was need.

The ten students receiving awards of $1,000 each are Gail Anderson, Steven Kelley, Barbara Akers, Joanne Day, Kim Falvey, Steven Hester, Roderick Pearcy, Pam

James Hodes, David Jeffries, and Sam Herskovitz received awards of $250 each.

Appreciation is extended by the College of Law to its alumni who made these awards possible through their generous donations to the Alumni Association Scholarship Fund.

December Grad Mel Maguire Serves As Secretary of Commerce During Transition

Amelia Rea "Mel" Maguire, a recent graduate of the College of Law, was named by Governor Wayne Mixon to serve as Secretary of Commerce from January 3, 1987, to January 20, 1987, during the transition from Governor Mixon to Secretary Jeb Bush.

Ms. Maguire's appointment was the first made by Mixon after he became Florida's 39th Governor on January 3, 1987, with the resignation of Gov. Bob Graham. Graham was compelled to resign prior to the commencement of his term as a newly elected U.S. Senator.

The first woman to head the 17-year-old agency, Maguire has served since October 1983 as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. She joined the Department in January 1983, and served as the agency's Inspector General until her appointment as Assistant Secretary.

Before joining Commerce, Ms. Maguire directed the Governor's Office of Local Government Liaison and coordinated the operations of the Florida Coastal Plains Regional Commission. She previously worked as a clerk and research associate of Dr. Allen Morris, Clerk of the Florida House of Representatives.

Ms. Maguire earned her undergraduate degree from the University of Florida and graduated with honors from the Florida State University College of Law in December 1986. She has accepted a position with the Miami office of the law firm of Holland & Knight and will begin work in June.

ABA/AALS Site Evaluation Team Visits In March

A site evaluation team from the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools visited the College of Law on March 8-11, 1987.

Robert B. McKay, Professor of Law and the former Dean of New York University School of Law, was chairman of the visiting team. Professor McKay is also the past president of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. Professor Margaret A. Leary of the University of Michigan Law School, Judge Frank A. Kaufman of U.S. District Court, District of Maryland, Professor Gary H. Palm of the University of Chicago Law School, and Professor Marilyn V. Yarbrough of the University of Kansas School of Law were the other members of the team.

A law school accredited by the ABA continues in that status unless its approval is withdrawn by the House of Delegates of the ABA, and the Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar is responsible for conducting an evaluation of each approved law school every seven years. A report is submitted by the site evaluation team for consideration by the Accreditation Committee.

The evaluation team spent three days touring the law school facilities and talking with President Sliger, law school deans and faculty, staff members and students. At the conclusion of the visit and after his discussions with team members, Dean D'Alemberte stated that the visitors' reaction to the College of Law seemed to be very positive. —

Placement Office Activities Continue In Spring Semester

The Fall Recruiting Season has passed, but the Placement Office continues a busy schedule. Statistics have been accumulated on the Class of 1985-86, orientation has been held for the freshman class, and scheduling has begun for the Fall 1987 Recruiting Season.

Statistics for the 1985-86 graduates, based on first job out of law school, indicated that 47% of the class entered private law practice, largely with firms of two to twenty-five attorneys. Approximately 27% of the class accepted employment in government areas, including state attorney and public defender. Another 10% entered judicial clerkships at the state and federal level. The remainder are employed in business, military, and legal services or enrolled in advanced degree programs.

An orientation session was held in February for the freshman law students to explain the services and rules of the Placement Office. Approximately 75 students attended. More than 55 students were counseled individually regarding resume preparation and job opportunities.

Scheduling for the Fall Recruiting Season began on April 1, 1987. By April 8th, 65 firms had reserved interview dates. Last year, more than 100 firms scheduled on-campus visits. Space is limited this year, but dates are still available in late October or in November. Interested firms should contact the Placement Office at 904/644-4495 as soon as possible. —

Brown Bag Series Offers Variety of Spring Programs

The Brown Bag Luncheon Series continues to bring a variety of programs to the College of Law. These range from serious discussions of timely topics to cultural entertainment and lighthearted commentary.

In January, Senator Carrie Meek spoke in reference to Martin Luther King Day. A program in February featured Julius Chambers, Director-Counsel, NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., speaking on "The Evolution of Civil Rights Under the Constitution."

Several informative programs were held. These included information presented on January 13 regarding the new Summer Program in Barbados, a presentation by John Moore, Executive Director of the Florida Board of Bar Examiners, and a Report to the Student Body given by Dean Sandy D'Alemberte.

In March, anti-death-penalty lawyer Millard Farmer and Associate Deputy U.S. Attorney General Paul Cassell debated the capital punishment issue before an audience of 150 law students.

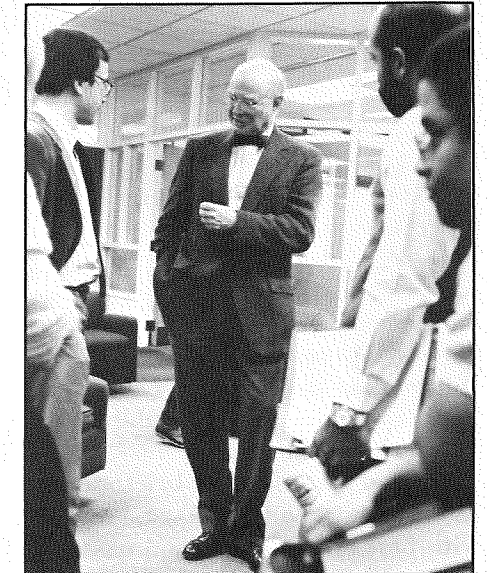

Cultural entertainment was provided with performances by the Meliora Quartet and the School of Music Trio. Particularly well received was a visit from the Asolo Conservatory from Sarasota which featured songs from musical comedies. In the troupe was Rick DeFuria, a former circuit court judge.

Other speakers included Richard McFarlain, Legislative Counsel for The Florida Bar; Harvard Dean Emeritus Al Sacks; and Mike Carter, President of the Florida Law Related Education Association.

On March 10, the College of Law was honored by a visit from the Justices of the Supreme Court of Florida. The Justices answered questions from the audience of law students. Appearing at the law school for the first time were recently appointed Justices Gerald Kogan and Stephen Grimes.

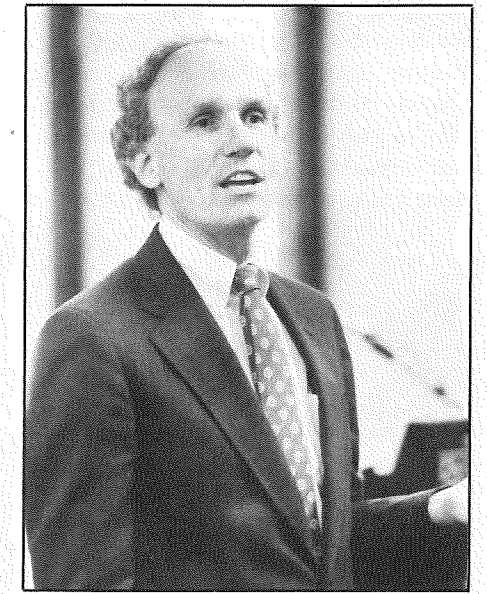

Dr. Elizabeth Bedell, Director of Student Affairs, deserves the credit for arranging this variety of programs for the Brown Bag Lunch Lecture Series. —

As a part of the College of Law's internship program with the Leon County Public Defender's appellate section, law student Jeff Cohen argued a case in the Florida Supreme Court on March 31, 1987.

Cohen, who also wrote three briefs during the internship, argued that the retroactive application of a 1986 cost statute violated the ex post facto clause of the State and Federal constitutions. The case, State v. Yost, had been consolidated with cases from several District Courts of Appeal on a certified question to the Supreme Court.

Cohen is the third law student in Florida to argue in the Supreme Court. The previous two law students, Pamela Presnell ('86) and Nicholas Whittle ('85), were also from Florida State.

Howard Eugene Adams announces the formation of Dixon, Blanton,

Justice Ben Overton to seek additional funding and proceed with planning for the bicentennial celebration. Although she feels that the State of Florida should have begun about two years ago, Bellamy said, "I'm comforted and encouraged by the fact that most of the other states are about where we are and, in fact, we may be ahead of a good many of them."

The key to the bicentennial celebration, say Bellamy and Justice Overton, will be local involvement. So far, at least 40 cities and towns have applied for designation as official bicentennial locales. The Commission will oversee the implementation of educational programs and arrange activities commemorating dates of particular importance.

Bellamy is a graduate of the 1978 class of the College of Law and practices law in Tallahassee. Most recently, she was a City Commissioner for the City of Tallahassee and served as mayor until 1986.
